Introduction

Distance learning and telehealth involve the use of electronic communications to enable educators and related service practitioners to provide services for the purpose of IEP implementation. The information exchanged and obtained through distance learning and telehealth may be used for diagnosis, therapy, follow-up and/or education, and may include all of the following:

- > Student records
- > Medical records and images
- > Live two-way audio and/or video
- > Output data from sound and video files

Electronic systems used will incorporate network and software security protocols to protect the confidentiality of student identification and imaging data and will include measures to safeguard the data and to ensure its integrity against intentional or unintentional corruption.

Expected Benefits

- > Improved access to services by enabling a student to remain in his/her home (or at a remote site) to receive IEP prescribed services from a healthcare practitioner at a distance/other site(s).
- > Continuation of IEP prescribed services.

Possible Risks

As with any service, there are potential risks associated with the use of telehealth. These risks include, but may not be limited to:

- > Information transmitted may not be sufficient (e.g. poor resolution of images) to allow for appropriate decision making by a practitioner;
- > Delays in service could occur due to deficiencies or failures of the equipment and technology;
- > In rare instances, security protocols could fail, causing a breach of privacy of personal identifiable information
